

Description: The title of my sculpture is called Attraction. In this sculpture, I use television as a contrast. I want to contrast that during this period, we are all distracted by TV or mobile phones while studying. This sculpture also expresses my views on these external disturbances. As you can see, this sculpture I didn't put it neatly on top of each other. You can see that the whole sculpture doesn't seem to be balanced as if you take out a book, the whole sculpture will fall down. That's what I'm trying to say. On the one hand, I wanted to show that I read every day, and on the other hand, I wanted to show that I wouldn't touch the books for fear of picking up the pieces. In daily reading, if I sit in front of the TV and read a book, basically there is no reading. Reading has become watching TV. I think this is the temptation we can't avoid. Nowadays the development of electronic products is more and more advanced, people have already chosen e-books among books and e-books. This is the future we cannot avoid. Paper books will become obsolete. This is also what I want to express my regret for the current situation.
