

Gatsby's Past Benchmark Writing

Let's review a CER response using the quote provided on the previous page. Imagine this is your prompt for a CER response: Why does Gatsby's past help him reinvent himself?

Gatsby's past helps him reinvent himself because he essentially severs all ties to his past to create a new person. Nick describes Gatsby's parents as "shiftless and unsuccessful farm people" (Fitzgerald 98). Gatsby is widely successful and in no way shiftless; in fact, Gatsby is a motivated in business and strives to have the best of everything in life. From his house, to his car, to his clothes, to his parties, Gatsby wants only the most luxurious and opulent. Furthermore, Nick claims that Gatsby sees himself as "the son of God...sprang from the Platonic conception of himself" (Fitzgerald 98). Gatsby completely dissociates himself parents and claims God as his father. He cuts ties with everything in his past in order to recreate his future. Finally, Gatsby invents the ideal person "a seventeen-year-old boy would want to be" (Fitzgerald 98). Interestingly, Gatsby's reinvention is based on a teenage boy's ideas of the ideal person. His bleak childhood prompts him to create a new and much improved version of himself. Clearly, Gatsby's past propels him to create a new version of himself.

"Can't repeat the past?" he cried incredulously. 'Why of course you can!'"

He looked around him wildly, as if the past were lurking here in the shadow of his house, just out of reach of his hand.

'I'm going to fix everything just the way it was before,' he said, nodding determinedly. 'She'll see.'

He talked a lot about the past, and I gathered that he wanted to recover something, some idea, of himself perhaps, that had gone into loving Daisy. His life had been confused and disordered since then, but if he could once return to a certain starting place and go over it all slowly, he could find out that thing was..." (Fitzgerald 110).
