Scenario

Imagine that you are a database administrator for SNHU Car Parts and Accessories. Currently, the organization has a relational database running on Microsoft SQL Server. The company sells car parts and accessories out of its Manchester, NH, location and through its online e-commerce website, and is thinking about expanding to other areas of the country.

You have recently been promoted to senior database administrator and have been tasked with two projects. Knowing that the business is planning on growing and expanding, you have been asked by the information technology (IT) director to:

Milestone Four: Job Aid, Part II

In Module Five, you will submit a two- to three-page paper that provides a new employee with an in-depth description of the administration of a database. Specifically, you should explain the steps required to:

- Create tables, views, and stored procedures
- Copy a database
- Attach and detach a database
- Import data from external sources
- Use SQL Profiler to correctly baseline database
